Mike Hale started up next. Could he make up the difference and capture the win? The look on his face entering the final obstacle was one of cautious confidence. He entered the course and rolled on his side. Hale and his spotter gave it a valiant effort to put the rig on its four wheels, but it was too much and Mike Hale was left with a rig on its side and third place.

Danny Rohrer then came on course. He entered in a hurry from the pits after doing a repair. Danny came through in a rage like a man possessed. He sliced and diced and bettered the score that Chris May laid down. His score of 15 points was tough to beat. For Gavin Lewis to walk away with the title of winner, he would have to put up a score lower than 25 points.

Lewis looked worried before entering the course. One cone fell and a second cone fell. He was concerned. Then it clicked and Gavin Lewis was a man on a mission. His spotter and him found a new focus on the course and masterfully drove the course. With just seconds left on the clock, Gavin was stuck on the final hump separating him from victory lane. He backed it up and shot out of the course and when the score was totaled he had scored 21 points and took the win at TheRoc 4x4.
